Rain dampens umbrella breakfast and parade

A rainy and cool morning provided a backdrop but not a deterrent to the Elks and Royal Purple rodeo breakfast and parade on Saturday.

Four hundred people crowded into the Elks Hall on 20th Street to enjoy the annual pancake breakfast when rainfall discouraged the usual street picnic.

"Judging by the food we served, we were on par with previous years," said Didsbury Elks exalted leader Steve Varga as he helped clean the kitchen after the meal.

A basket full of donations collected at the hall entrance will be used in the various Elks community and charitable ventures, said parade co-chair

"I have been volunteering for this breakfast for as long as I have been an Elk, and it was held for years before that," said second vice-president Ron Townrow.

"It's a 30-year tradition ."

The parade route was lined with umbrellas, including dozens of child-sized brollies as spectators chose to fend off the rain rather than miss the festival.

Mayor Rick Mousseau and RCMP detachment commander Sgt. Kim Pasloske headlined the candy distribution at the head of the parade.

The floats were wet to the point of being bedraggled, but participants braved the elements along with three pipe bands and four fleets of Shriners vehicles.

As the morning ended, parade co-chairs Margo Wood and Fakir jointly announced the results of the six categories of judging in the parade.

Grasse Lumber was the winner of the commercial float category. Pharmasave Drugs finished second and McMann Autobody was third.

The winning non-commercial float was Didsbury Minor Hockey, with the Didsbury Public Library placing second and the ag society finishing in third place. Merv Green of Three Hills won the Antique Open category with his 1928 Ford truck. From Didsbury, Rod Anderson was second with a 1950 John Deere tractor and Kevin Arbuckle finished third with a 1953 John Deere.

In the antique car category, the Didsbury museum finished first, Trevor Marshall won second place with his 1929 Mercedes, and Clarence Creasse was in third place.

Best horse and rider was Dalton Labrie. Tarya Labrie was second and Caitlin Lanthier was third.

The sole horse and buggy entrant and first-place finisher in the category was Kerry Salisbury.

Didsbury florists earn certification

BY FRANK DARRS MVP Staff

Didsbury florists Gordon Fulton and Betty Houle earned the international Certified Florist Designer (CFD) desig nation from the American Institute of Floral Designers (AIFD) after a fourhour evaluation in Denver, Colo. on Fulton and Houle both won the prestigious certification after a test in which they each designed a bridal bouquet, an event arrangement, a sym pathy arrangement, an arrangement to wear and a copy of a picture.

The Victoria's Flowers and Gifts flor-ists have also been asked to become accredited members of the AIFD an induction ceremony next July in California.

"Before the test, we had no idea what we would be asked to design or the materials we would be given to work with," Fulton said in an interview.

"There were seven adjudicators and we were two of 115 florists tested from Canada, the U.S., Mexico, China, Japan, the Philippines and South Korea.

"When the four hours are up, you step away from the table or are disqualified

"Only 67 passed the test." he said. Fulton and Houle are the only florists in Mountain View County to hold the CFD. There are two CFD florists in Calgary and two in Red Deer

Houle has been a florist for 40 years and came to Didsbury from Vancouver with the intention of retiring.

"I am doing what I love. Some people go to work to pay the rent. I go because I love flowers and their smell and feel and colour," said Houle.

Fulton "fell into" floral design after trying several other occupations.

"It has been a learning curve that goes straight up," Fulton said.
"Florists sell emotion. We meet at the best and worst milestones in their lives - weddings, funerals, baby showers, engagements

During the U.S. trip to the AIFD symposium, Fulton had "a career highlight of a lifetime" when he was asked to sign the floral arrangements for a Hilary Clinton fundraising dinner

The hosts held the dinner in their home and I knew they expected something very special for a lady who was very special to them," said Fulton.

"It was a really cool experience

Cyberbullying: It's No LOL Matter Cyberbullying can have SERIOUS CONSEQUENCES and should be taken seriously. Let's all be aware! Say NO to bullying!

Although cyberbullying is on the rise, there are some things that parents and children can do to help put a stop to such unfortunate instances.

• Parents who feel their child is not emotionally ready for the responsibility of a digital device can hold back on purchasing a smartphone or choose one with very limited features. Some schools set strict limits on phone usage at school, and children who go only from school to home and vice versa may not have the need for an "emergency phone" that can open up a window for trouble.

 Adolescents and teens should feel comfortable talking with their parents without the fear of reprimand. Otherwise, they may hide instances of cyberbullying or not know how to broach sensitive topics like bullying. Parents can engage in conversation with their children often and stress that the doors of communication are always open.

Teens should be made aware that cyberbullying is a very real occurrence and is not just other kids "having fun" or "joking." If behaviour is repetitive and hurtful, it should be made public and addressed.

 Parents can monitor and limit their children's personal accounts. Some smartphone and tablet applications can be mirrored on the main account, enabling parents to see incoming text or video messages. • When online, children should be advised not to share personal information. Social media sites may be used by bullies to gather sensitive information about a person that can be used against them at a later time. Children should be urged to keep passwords secret and to never give information such as birthdays, phone numbers and addresses to people who aren't close friends. Friend lists should be restricted to only those people students interact with frequently to minimize the chance for bullying or other inappropriate behaviour.

• Teens who have been bullied can keep evidence of the bullying and may benefit from talking with a counselor.

A thief cut a small swath through Julia Place in south Didsbury on the night of Aug. 9 - 10, damaging a fence on one property and stealing a wallet from a truck in incidents that are thought to be related.

In another theft on Aug. 10 a Didsbury family lost a washer and dryer to thieve when they left their home unlocked.

And another homeowner had several electronic devices stolen after the rear door of their home was forced open.

In rural crime, thieves pried open a door to a home on Rge. Rd. 52 and made off with jewelry, leaving behind guns and electronics

On Aug. 6 the front door of a home on Highway 579 near Water Valley was knocked down and jewelry was also stolen.

Loss of volunteers ends Lone Pine bench fair

BY FRANK DABBS

After 30 years, the Lone Pine Agricultural Society's annual bench fair is fading into the sunset.

The ag society's executive has cancelled the 2015 edition of the fair because it could not find a volunteer coordinator for the event.

Lone Pine farm wife Susan Page who has coordinated the fair for 13 stepped up to take her place.

"The number of entrants has declined from about 800 to 450 last year," Page said.

However the real crunch is the loss of volunteers.

"I don't know why." Page said.

"Young people are busy working and raising kids and don't volunteer

Page doubts that the Lone Pine hall will ever stage a fair again.

Commentary

Technological landfill advancements a benefit

Death, taxes and waste are three things that you can count on says Pat Sliworsky, the CAO of Mountain View Regional Waste Management Commission.

Sliworsky has spent a 26-year career managing municipal waste so that the environment and taxpayer-funded budgets are protected by using technological innovation and good operating techniques

DABBS

The Mountain View Regional Waste Management Commission, which has members that include the municipalities of the county, Didsbury, Carstairs, Cremona, Olds and Sundre, doesn't have a dump, it has a landfill.

"Gone are the days when we piled garbage in pits and set fire to " Sliworksy says

No longer are dumps havens for feeding bears and curious kids.

While the commission is hearing griping from Olds-area residents because of the closure of the transfer station, its landfill near Didsbury quietly goes about the business of processing the waste the county's 12,500 residents and businesses dispose of each year.

Sliworsky's guided tour of the landfill and its technology is authoritative because he has done as much as anyor during his career to set the standards for Alberta landfills. Although the waste management commission is a creature of the provincial Municipal Affairs department which audits its financial records, it is Alberta Environment that establishes, oversees and enforces the always-increasing list of environmental standards the landfill must meet.

To meet these standards and at the same time manage the taxpayer-funded costs responsibly, new technologies and techniques are constantly emerging.

The most recent is the use of hollow metal plates called iron grizzlies as the required daily cover for the garbage ted to the landfill and compacted to eliminate air that enables the formation of methane and complicates water management. The daily cover was formerly provided by spreading six inches of clay over the waste. The use of the seven-foot by 32-foot by six-inch plates meets the regulations and the plates can be speedily removed at the beginning of each day and reused overnight.

The financial, time and space savings add up to a considerable financial benefit as well as operating convenience. The environmental improvements began decades ago with the introduction of a lining system installed before a landfill opens

The layers of clay and synthetic material liners prevent groundwater contamination by leaching from the waste. A half dozen water monitoring wells around the perimeter of the landfill are tested regularly by an independent

Water monitoring will continue after the landfill closes in about 15 years and cells are covered by clay and soil until Alberta Environment allows the site to be abandoned.

Its future use is limited to pasture land.

The coming thing in Alberta waste management is waste to energy

Edmonton has embarked on the first waste to energy project, however Alberta Environment is proceeding cautiously until it fully understands the problems that the process has

Sliworsky said Mountain View County is one of 75 Alberta municipalities that have joined SAEWA, the Southern Alberta Energy from Waste Alliance, to research and understand the technology, and to plan its introduc

Letters Economic sovereignty at risk

Federal election issues follow shallow personal interest. Meanwhile, Canadian economic sovereignty is eroding at an alarming rate

For example, the G3 Global Grain Group, a joint venture of Bunge Canada, owned by a European agribusiness, and the Saudi Agriculture and Livestock Investment Corporation purchased the Canadian Wheat Board. G3 is now studying a new grain terminal in the port of Vancouver and intends to build a foreign-owned, coast-to-coast grain enterprise.

Do we realize just how important Canadian oil and gas is to China? The Chinese apparently do and have invested in the sector. And so it goe for everything in the Canadian economy that is not tied down. The Brazilians now control Tim

The outcome of this is that there will be new global sheriffs in town

I believe that we are at a historical tipping point. The next four years of inattentive should get us right over the edge of the effective loss of Canadian economic sovereignty

Ironically this pattern originated in the acquisition of Canada that we "own" today. Our forefa-thers told the natives that we would live together with them forever and happy in this land if they would put their X on papers that they could not read. Details to follow. We call these ... Treaties

Nice trick. This worked for a hundred years It's come home to roost though, and we should get that sorted out if we have any hopes of retaining our toehold on this country. In some regard, we comprise 35 million illegal aliens on Canadian soil, still processing our moral immigration papers

NDP to nominate Red Deer-Mountain View hopeful Aug. 24

BY FRANK DABBS

candidate has pulled out of the NDP nomination race in the new Red Deer-Mountain View riding.

The party announced on Sunday that Evan Bedford has withdrawn his nomination and is throwing his support behind Paul Harris.

The party's meeting to choose a candidate for the riding in this fall's federal election will be held on Aug. 24 at the Red Deer Public Library.

Originally, three candidates were seeking the NDP nod in Red Deer-Mountain View: Red Deer city councillor Paul Harris, public school trustee Dianne Macaulay and former Green Party candidate Evan Bedford, a Red Deer County engineering co-ordinator.

However, on the weekend, Bedford, a freelance energy and ecology columnist for the Red Deer Advocate, announced his decision to withdraw and support Harris instead.

"I have no hesitation in endorsing Paul in the upcoming NDP nomination contest. I feel that he is the candidate who is the most capable of unseating the Conservative incumbent," Bedford said in an NDP news release issued Sunday.

'Notley effect"

Riding president Stephen Merredew said the "Rachel" (Notley) factor following the NDP May election triumph that saw the party capture both Red Deer provincial seats has fed the enthusiasm to contest the federal nominations

"In past federal elections, getting

NDP candidates was not easy, but that has changed this year," said Merredew Harris is a Red Deer smal small businessman and property developer. His Sunworks home décor store in downtown Red Deer is a popular highend shopping destination.

He was sanctioned by his fellow councillors on Red Deer council this year because he was inadvertently late in paying nearly $6,600 in property taxes, but they decided not to challenge popular community leader's eligibility to continue to sit on council.

Harris is known for his unconventional campaign organization, relying on social media and personal contact, not lawn signs and literature mail-outs.

Macaulay enjoys the inside track in the nomination battle due to her long service to the party. Raised on a beef and grain farm near Bentley, Macaulay also claims the best credentials to campaign in the rural part of the riding. She is the mother of two, a former Starbucks barista and a volunteer co-ordinator for Central Alberta Family

The Conservative Red Deer-Mountain View incumbent is Pine Lake farmer and teacher Earl Dreeshen. Prior to redistribution he held the Red Deer riding.

Walper is the Libertarian candidate. Walper grew up in the lower mainland of British Columbia and moved to Red Deer to work as an oil and gas drilling fluid technician. He is well known in car club circles.

The Liberals are organizing a riding association and have yet to nominate a candidate.

Dreeshen slams McQuaig's oilsands comments

BY KRISTINE JEAN MVP Staff

Toronto NDP candidate Linda McQuaig came under fire last week for comments she made regarding Alberta's oilsands and the oil indus-

And the well-known Ontario author and activist is hearing the reaction loud and clear in the province, including Central Alberta.
"A lot of people recognize that a lot in the ground if we're going to meet our climate change targets," McQuaig said on the CBC's Power and Politics program that aired Aug. 7.

Amidst backlash from both the Conservative and Liberal parties, the NDP later clarified her comments, and released a statement from the party's natural resources critic, noting her comments referred to a 2009 international report.

date for the new Red Deer-Mountain View riding, was just as concerned about her comments as many Albertans were last week.

"This person was put up as a spokes-person for the New Democratic Party. It wasn't just a candidate making a comment at a town hall (meeting)," said Dreeshen. "This was someone that the NDP felt understood what their policies were, and I think perhaps the fact that she stated it clearly, was something now that they're wishing they could distance themselves from," he added.

The disconcerting comments only show the true and basic philosophy of the NDP within the last several years, noted Dreeshen.

"(NDP Leader) Thomas Mulcair is clearly opposed to resource develop-ment and specifically development of the oilsands," he said.

Vidsbury Rodeo

MVP Staff

The 2015 Didsbury Fair and Rodeo started with a bang and a flash and the thunder and lightning in the sky weren't just the traditional fireworks display.

A late evening electrical storm with an accompanying downpour Friday night turned the ag society's rodeo ring into a muddy bath at the end of each ride for the cowboys.

It was a challenging week end to be a Foothills Cowboy Association competitor for more than just the mud.

Rodeos at Vulcan and Kikino, south of Lac la Biche, meant that many young men were on the road at night, driving between events.

The road into the ag society grounds was busy with incoming pickups hauling weary cowboys through the night.

Friday night featured events for the children, and this year the feature was a pile of sand filled with loonies, toonies and quarters donated by Tanas Concrete.

The kids got as muddy as the cowboys searching the sand for treasure

As volunteers knocked down the rodeo on Sunday, there were still children looking in the sand pile and finding coins.

In the Beer Gardens, the society this year launched its collec tion of memorabilia with a poster promoting the 1958 Foothills Cowboy Association rodeo finals at the Didsbury Memorial Arena on Nov. 11 that year

Tractor pull honours farming

BY FRANK DABBS MVP Staff

The tractor pull on Sunday took place in appropriate farming weather – rain, cold wind, mud and just enough blue sky to the north to make a pair of jeans.

"The tractor pull celebrates plowing," said event organizer Clifford Scott of the First Alberta Two Cylinder Club.

"Mud tests every farmer on a tractor," Scott said.

"On this kind of track it's not the power of the tractor that decides a winner, it is the skill of the operator," said competitor Mark Gardener.

Scott designed the 17,500-pound sled for the final event at the 2015 Didsbury Agricultural Society's fair and rodeo. The competitors pulled the sled twice and the total distance determined their score.

During the intermission, a Kiddie Pull gave 12 children the opportunity to go into the 35-foot wide track and demonstrate their skills on peddle tractors.

Sunday's classes were organized by weight of the tractors: featherweight, below 4,000 pounds; Class 1, 4,000 to 4,900 pounds; Class 2, 5,000 to 5,900 pounds; Class 3, 6000 to 6,900 pounds; Class 4, 7,000 to 8,499 pounds; Class 5, 8,500 to 10,000 pounds; and Class 6, over 10,000 pounds.

Shari Garrock of Black Diamond defeated two other challengers in Class 6 with the longest combined pull of the day, 416.84 feet, with a 1959 John Deere 830.

a distance of 353,35 feet

Robbie Spady from Carstairs bested her Class 3 competitors on an International Super w 65 with a total pull of 359.35 feet. Cremona's Mac Bellamy topped Class 2, operating a 1950 Oliver 80 with a distance of 341.96 feet.

Mark Gardener from Olds won Class 1 with a 1957 International G 50. Wade Goerzen pulled the sled 105.93 feet to win the featherweight class, with a 1962 Allis WD owned by his father Albert, who also competed in several classes.

"They are also opposed to pipeline development, both east and west. It truly is something that we have to be concerned about Dreeshen pointed to the many benefits of resource production in Canada.

"I think our whole country benefits from our resource industry and cer-tainly, the oilsands are such a critical part," said Dreeshen. "The manufacturing in Quebec and in Ontario, and all the other kinds of things that we see throughout the country, they're all tied into the work that is done here in Alberta.

Dreeshen noted that the money generated from jobs in the oil and gas industry done by both Albertans and by other Canadians benefit everyone.

"Those are taxes that go into Canadian projects, into our health care, into our schools and into our social services and also into things that we are able to do as we try to benefit those throughout the world," explained Dreeshen.

For those concerned about the environment, a balance is possible, he noted.

"When I go to other places in the world they look at what we have. Our regulations and the things we do to protect the environment and they are in awe," he said. "Albertans do have a right to be concerned. The fact that they are opposing our pipeline developments, it would landlock all of our gas and oil shipments from Alberta," said Dreeshen. "That doesn't just hurt Albertans, it hurts all Canadians.
